

Large depth hoar crystals are typically cupped and striated. These angular grains have a very difficult time bonding together, which creates a weak foundation for the winter snowpack. This photo was taken in Telemark Meadows in the southern Madison Range. Photo K. Birkeland

Advisory Region
Southern Madison

Forecast link: GNFAC Avalanche Advisory for Sun Dec 13, 2015GNFAC Avalanche Forecast for Mon Dec

14, 2015

Southern Madison, 2015-12-12